The Clock Tower

Forward

Probably few people realize what the planning and printing of an annual entails. Every page has to be planned and laid out separately. This is done rather roughly at first. Then each page has to go through several other steps, some of which require great precision, before it is ready for the actual process of printing.

Here at NCSD the personnel available and with the ability to accomplish these tasks is quite small. These few students, along with their two faculty advisors, must put in long hours of labor, much of which must be done outside of school.

We have had many compliments from important people of numerous schools on the caliber of our annuals and we cannot help feeling proud of this.

We hope that this year's book will be able to uphold our standard of excellence.

Dedication

Mrs. Meta H. Bigham

Mr. Albert F. Mehl

The best way that we could think of to express our sincere appreciation to our wonderful sponsors, Mrs. Bigham and Mr. Mehl, was to dedicate our annual to them. Our junior year they spent innumerable hours with us — and there were thirty-seven of us — working like beavers to enable us to earn enough money for what had to be a sizable senior fund for a class as large as ours.

They have also given much time to us this year. They are such good sports that they made our trip to Florida a most joyful experience which will be long remembered.

Many thanks and much love to you two very fine people!

Class Prophecy

By MARION PARRIS

After I was graduated from high school at NCS D, I tried to find a job that paid well. I worked at several different places for ten years and I saved most of my money during these years, but I still wasn't satisfied. I talked things over with Dad, who had had many years of experience at managing stores before his retirement, and he advised me to go into business for myself. I decided to start a department store in Morganton, since Belk's was still the only department store there at the time. I thought I'd call it Lindley's because that is my middle name and several people had told me that it was a pretty one. I borrowed some money from the bank to add to my savings and soon things began to get moving.

I was walking around one day after construction of the building had begun to watch the men riveting and welding. One of the welders threw something down at my feet. Imagine my surprise when I looked up and saw my old classmate Maroney Williams! He said that he was the world's best welder and that I needn't worry about the steel support part of my building. I hoped that he was right.

A short time before the building was to be completed, I began to think of ordering supplies for my store. I went to Charlotte which, by that time, was a metropolis second in the South in area and population only to Atlanta.

First I visited a company which sold all sorts of things for the grooming of hair. I asked to see the manager and my eyes almost popped out of my head when I saw that it was Ann Scarboro. She had always known how to fix elaborate hair arrangements when we were in school together. She told me that she had a marvelous assistant who was great with young children. She told her secretary to call this assistant in and there stood Catherine Parrish! This reminded me that Catherine had always loved little children and had had endless patience with them. After I had placed my order and was leaving the building, I saw a man carefully pick a penny up off the floor that I guessed he had dropped. Then he began looking all over the place to be sure that he hadn't dropped any more. Guess who the man was. It was my old friend, Jimmy Miller! He said that he had retired and I argued that he was too young for retirement. He replied that he had worked hard and saved enough money so that he could travel around the world and still have enough left so that he could live in comfort for the rest of his life. He had come to Ann's company to see if she had anything to take the curl out of his hair permanently.

After our talk I went outside to get a breath of fresh air. I started back to the site of my store when I spotted a place right next door to where my new building would be. It was a wholesale dressmaking company and the sign said, "Anita's Design House." I wandered in and soon a beautifully-dressed lady came up and asked if she could help me. I told her that I was going to open a department store and would like to look around. Then we recognized each other. It was Anita Smith and she was very much surprised that the new building was to be mine and that we would be next-door neighbors! She couldn't wait to introduce me to her head designer. I really wasn't very much surprised to find that it was Cheryl Simmons. She had always been able to design and make anything when we had been at NCS D together.

After my conversation with them my stomach reminded me that it was time for lunch. I saw a restaurant down the street and entered and found an empty table. A most attractive waitress came to take my order. She looked familiar. Then both our mouths dropped open when we realized that we were old classmates meeting again after ten long years. It was Kay Williams! We reminisced for such a long time that I almost forgot to order my lunch. She gave me excellent service and I left her a large tip in appreciation.

After we said our goodbyes, I started to cross the street. I saw a big limousine coming, but I ran quickly. The car came within an inch of hitting me in spite of my speed. It screeched to a halt and a uniformed chauffeur got out. He started to bless me out, but then he stopped and we began staring at each other. The chauffeur was Danny Steele and he had recognized me. When he introduced me to his passenger in the back seat, I almost fainted! There sat Vandella Simmons clad in mink and wearing so many diamonds that I was almost blinded. I was flabbergasted to learn that she owned the company that made these luxurious cars. Meanwhile a crowd had gathered. Vandella, Danny, and I said a few hurried words and then I began to struggle to get through the mob.

When I finally reached the other side of the street, I saw a group of people listening to a street singer who, I found out, was advertising a show he was to give that night. I looked way up and there was Boyd Arrington! He had done a good job of pretending to be a singer in our school days—but a totally deaf singer! I couldn't believe it. I knew that he was really singing because all the people were listening intently. After he had finished singing, the people clapped wildly and rushed to get his autograph. I finally got to him and asked him about this miracle and if he remembered me. He answered that of course he knew who I was. Then he explained the miracle. It seemed that Terry Plyler had become a famous surgeon. He had performed the first successful ear nerve transplant in history on Boyd who now had perfect hearing. The second part of the miracle had been played by a science teacher at NCS D, Mr. Olouse Tullos. He had invented a mechanism which, when inserted in the throat, enable anyone to have a beautiful voice. Mr. Tullos hadn't taken out a patent on his invention. He had taught Boyd and they had an agreement that he would receive a percentage of all of the money taken in from Boyd's singing engagements and recordings. Both teacher and pupil were now millionaires.

After the store was completed, and we had had our grand opening, I entered rather late one morning. As I went in, I looked around at the customers. Then I saw a very thin woman waving wildly at me. I was puzzled. I had no idea who she was. When she told me that she was the former Judy Dilda, I almost dropped my teeth! She said that she had married Tommy Nance, the famous wrestler who had never been beaten. He had taught her all of his exercises and they had both lost tons of weight.

A few minutes later a very fat lady customer asked me where the candy department was. I directed her there and watched as she bought pound after pound of a large assortment of candies. When she finished her purchasing, she started to the cashier's counter to pay her bill. I happened to notice that the cashier had gone somewhere, so I went to take her place. I added up the customer's bill and it was so much that she asked if I would accept a check. I asked for some identification and when she showed it to me, it was simply incredible! This enormous creature turned out to be Melba Snow who had been as skinny as a rail when we were in school together.

One morning my secretary told me that the president of a new soft drink company wanted to see me. When my secretary ushered her in, it turned out to be Linda McCall. She told me that she had invented a new drink that had quickly become very popular. She had brought a sample bottle packed in ice. I tested it and could readily understand its fast-growing popularity. It was delicious and most refreshing. I placed an order with her to keep me furnished with "Linda Soda." We talked over old times for a few minutes and then she accidentally hit my arm and I spilled the rest of the drink all over myself. She apologized and then recommended an excellent dry cleaning establishment that did a big business. She gave me the name and the street and number. My secretary sponged me off as best she could and, after the store closed, I went to this dry cleaning place. Whom should I see but good old Robert Autry! He took me to an enclosed booth, told me to take off my suit, and said that it would be ready in a very short time. He was as good as his word. It seemed only a matter of seconds until he brought it back, beautifully cleaned and pressed. Robert had created a new cleaning process that had revolutionized the business. He had even done work for the President of the United States and the First Lady.

When I returned to the store the next day, the first thing I saw was a policewoman arresting a shoplifter. I had a short interview with the officer and found out that she was Diana Power. It seemed that she could spot a shoplifter a mile off and this was her only assignment on the police force because she was so good at it.

I next saw a lady customer who had been in the book department ever since I had arrived that morning. I went over to see if I could assist her. She had been looking for a certain book, but had been too bashful to ask anyone about it. Then I recognized Neia White. I should have known! She had always been quite timid ever since I had known her.

When I walked out of the store at closing time that evening, I was bumped into by a man who was unsteady on his feet. I realized that it was Winford Winslow and I asked him what was the matter. He said that he had felt a cold coming on and had decided that a drink might help to ward it off. When he went into a bar, he saw that the owner was Fred Ballew. Fred had played a trick on him and had given him a very large drink. Poor Winford!

All of a sudden I began to feel terrible myself. Since I was a bachelor, I decided that the best place for me was a hospital. I went home, packed a bag, engaged a room at the hospital, and called an ambulance. I was feeling weak and dizzy, but I knew the ambulance driver. It was Dallas Partin. They must have given me some powerful medicine at the hospital because I was completely knocked out. The next morning I saw dimly a very small white-clothed figure standing by my bed. When my vision cleared, I saw that it was Ann Young. We had a lot of conversations about our school days while I was in the hospital.

After my illness the doctor advised me to take it easy. One evening after I had spent about half a day at the store, I decided to go to a night club for a change. I looked up and down the street and finally saw a bright new neon sign which flashed, "Go-Go Girls." I walked down and went into the place. I saw what I thought must be the big shot owner and found it to be Elwyn Leatherman. When he saw me, he came over and we sat and chatted for a while.

Several days later I went to the "World 800," formerly the "World 600." Guess who won? Larry Triplett! I waited around until I got close enough to congratulate him. We promised to meet again when there would be time enough to talk together about our years at NCS, what our old classmates were doing, and where they were.

A few days after that I saw a pre-season pro football game advertised and decided to go. When I found my seat, I saw a sports photographer walking back and forth along the sidelines. I looked at him through my binoculars and, as I had thought, it was Eddie Robinson. He had always been a whiz at taking pictures and had taken, developed, and printed most of the pictures for our annual. When the teams' starting lineups were announced, I was amazed to hear the name of Dee Clanton. He quarterbacked the winning team and really made monkeys of the opponents with his running and passing.

By that time I was beginning to feel pretty spry and felt that a long trip wouldn't do me any harm. I had never had a chance to do much traveling, so I took a plane to Mexico. A beautiful stewardess came to find out what I wanted for lunch. We immediately recognized each other. She was Mary Ann Fowler and she told me during our short conversation that her husband, Jimmy Hall, was pilot of the plane. She took me up front to see him and we had a few words together.

When we landed in Mexico, a mechanic walked up to see if everything had gone all right during the flight. The mechanic was Tommy Jackson. We had only a few minutes to talk because he was very busy.

That afternoon I attended my first bull fight. I was sitting in a seat close to the arena and next to me sat Barbara Oxendine. She told me that the famous bullfighter was her husband. He had never lost a fight and had never been injured, according to Barbara. He was a national hero. We talked of what we knew about our former classmates, and Barbara told me that Brenda Bray and her husband were missionaries in South Africa.

From Mexico I flew to California. One night I saw a very good movie. The title was "Gone with the Mini-Wind" and the star was Marion Gibbs. She gave an excellent performance. I later learned that she was married to her director.

My last visit before returning to Morganton was to our National Capital. I toured all the spots of interest and wound up at the White House. There, to my great surprise, I was greeted by Linda Dixon. She was social secretary to the First Lady. While we talked, she told me that Barbara Morton had become the first woman president of Harvard University. Then she said that Jeannie Spence was a judge in London, England. These girls had been the most intelligent ones in the Class of 1969.

When I finally returned to Morganton, I looked around my apartment and found the 1969 annual that I had, with many of my classmates, worked very hard on. I dusted it off and checked through it to see if I had really seen all of them. It was very rewarding to have found out that all thirty-six of them had turned out to be not only successful but happy as well.

Class Will

By BARBARA MORTON

We, the Class of 1969, being of sound mind and body, do hereby declare this to be our last will and testament. Before leaving our beloved school we wish to bequeath our most cherished possessions to our dear schoolmates and faculty. These gifts are bestowed upon the recipients without malice, but with the love and affection of the donors.

Brenda Bray presents her love of daily letter writing to Imogene Cummings.

Boyd Arrington leaves his tall, lanky physique to Gary Hunnings.

Robert Autry bequeaths his love for helping counselors to Randy Caines.

Fred Ballew donates his bad habit of cussing to Steve Warren.

Dee Clanton presents his habit of wearing no shoes except his bedroom slippers in the dormitory to Lee McDaniel.

Una Clark gives her craving for chocolate to Eva Mae Bruce.

Judy Dilda leaves her love for dancing to Mary Medley in the hope that Mary will learn and find out how much fun it is.

Linda Dixon presents her liking for watching T.V. every chance she gets to Sherry Wilson.

Mary Ann Fowler gives her million dollar luxuriant hair to Debbie Spencer.

Marion Gibbs leaves her habit of buying huge bags of groceries every Saturday to Janet Misenheimer.

Jimmy Hall gives his love of horseplaying with the boys to Wayne Herron.

Tommy Jackson bequeaths his wise practice of being thrifty with his money to Tony Moore.

Elwyn Leatherman donates his constantly talking about sports to Jimmy Ledford.

Linda McCall leaves her big frame to Judy Foust.

Jimmy Miller gives his fancy curly hair to Marty Blakely.

Barbara Morton leaves her position as chief cheerleader and her cheerleader's outfit to Joyce Boyd.

Tommy Nance bequeaths his habit of spoiling little kids to Lewis Suggs.

Barbara Oxendine donates her dark complexion to Ann Meshaw. It should look beautiful with Ann's light blonde hair.

Marion Parris leaves his terrible habit of being tardy to class to Roger Jones, but he hopes Roger doesn't take it up.

Catherine Parrish leaves her make-up kit to Pat Gaither. Pat is a pretty girl, but Catherine thinks that with a little make-up she would be even prettier.

Dallas Partin presents his practice of going home every weekend to Gene Oxendine.

Terry Plyler bequeaths his bottle of sun tan lotion to Joyce Sigmon who blisters badly if she is in the sun for 10 seconds.

Diana Power gives her wit to Judy Humphries.

Edward Robinson donates his love of listening to records to Gary Duncan.

Ann Scarboro bequeaths her monkey shines to Mrs. Crutchfield.

Cheryl Simmons leaves her knack for sewing to Mrs. Starrett who really needs it.

Vandella Simmons presents her getting angry about her fuzzy hair to Paula Spencer.

Melba Snow leaves her cute dimples to Helen Purcell.

Jeannie Spence gives her bad habit of chewing gum to Nancy Johnson.

Danny Steele presents his being serious with girls to Steve Power.

Larry Triplett leaves his calm, nonchalant manner to Jimmy Gibbs.

Neia White leaves all her stationery and stamps to Linda Gillespie.

Kathryn Williams donates her habit of buying magazines to Elaine Wilkie.

Winford Winslow leaves his inquisitiveness and his awful habit of arguing to Ray Rich.

Maroney Williams gives his mischievousness to Wayne Snow.

Ann Young presents her baby face to Kathy Eubanks.

Special Thanks

Mr. H. G. Royall, Jr.

Mr. Peter H. Ripley

Mr. Harold F. Brown, Jr.

Mrs. Anne B. Starrett

To Principal Royall for his valuable suggestions, wonderful cooperation when we had difficulties, and for allowing us to have an hour and a half of school time per week to work on the annual; to Dean Ripley for arranging and rearranging schedules so that we might have our senior pictures made, be measured for caps and gowns, and be excused from physical education classes to make pictures and perform other necessary tasks; to Mr. Harold Brown for doing, as he has always done since he has been at NCSD, the lion's share of the work; and to Mrs. Starrett for her advice and guidance.
